FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Business professional named president of international trade association

(MINNEAPOLIS, February 2, 2005) Long Valley, N.J. business professional David Ward was recently named president of the International Association of Commercial Collectors (IACC). The announcement was made during IACC's 34th Annual Convention in Miami. Mr. Ward continues his term on the IACC executive committee, which includes one year in each of four executive positions.

Mr. Ward was elected to the executive committee by his fellow association members and serves in a leadership role, providing guidance and direction for the association. He has been a professional in the credit and collection industry for over 20 years and is currently president of Delta Recovery Systems, the Long Valley, N.J.-based company he founded in 1993.

Mr. Ward is active in local politics and civic organizations, and currently serves as the president-elect of his local Rotary Club.

With 215 collection agency members and 142 attorney members, The International Association of Commercial Collectors Inc. (IACC) is the world's largest international trade association for commercial debt collection professionals. Headquartered in Minneapolis, IACC serves members throughout the United States and in 24 other countries worldwide. Members of IACC recover millions of dollars annually for their clients and provide valuable assistance to credit departments in controlling mounting debts.
